

IF YOU NEED HELP PAYING FOR VETERINARY SERVICES

Many of these organizations help only in emergency situations such as accidental injuries requiring immediate care, long term health problems requiring surgery or ongoing treatment, such as orthopedic repairs or chemotherapy for animals with cancer. Some can also provide pet food and other assistance to seniors and people with serious illness or disability.

Each organization has specific application criteria. Please check the organization's website first before calling.

This information is provided to help you in locating financial assistance to cover veterinary costs. The information has been compiled from many sources on the internet and was accurate at the time of compilation. You should always check the organization's website for the most up to date information.

Regular veterinary care is essential to keep your pet healthy. Speaking for Spot: Be the Advocate Your Dog Needs to Live a Happy, Healthy, Longer Life provides the information you need to make the most effective use of your veterinary care expenditures when your pet is healthy, when they are ill and at the time of end-of-life decisions. Please visit www.speakingforspot.com to read excerpts from Speaking for Spot. There you will also find "Advocacy Aids"- helpful health forms you can download and use for your own dog, and a collection of published articles on advocating for your pet's health. Speaking for Spot is available at Amazon.com, local bookstores, or your favorite online book seller.

Wishing you and your pet good health,

P.A.L.S., a Non Profit 501 (c)(3) organization, provides pet care including free deliveries of food and supplies, basic veterinary care and transportation, foster care, referrals, and information and support to companion pets of senior citizens, the disabled, and the critically ill. Many of our clients face their struggles without family assistance, their only companion being their trusted pet. Many have chronic diseases such as AIDS and Cancer, and some are simply too old to care for their pets.

HAWAII

Hawaiian Humane Society: PALS Program – (808) 946-2187, ext. 217

www.hawaiianhumane.org/programs/pals/

When caring for a pet becomes difficult because of a person's illness or an emergency situation, Pals volunteers help by providing temporary pet care. Care can include feeding, grooming, dog walking, litter box and small cage cleaning and rides to the veterinarian. Pals services are available to the elderly, those temporarily hospitalized, the disabled and victims of domestic violence. Services are provided in your home or a foster care home by Humane Society volunteers free of charge. Food and veterinary expenses are the responsibility of the pet owner. Services are dependent on the availability of volunteers.

To be eligible for financial support through the Good Samaritan fund:

Patients eligible for support will be common companion animal species. Such patients will have a need for life saving procedures and a reasonable prognosis for good long-term recovery.

Patients will be either ownerless or owned by clients that cannot pay for care due to circumstances beyond the client's control. Animals from animal control agencies, humane societies, and business entities will be considered owned and not eligible for funds.

Patients without an owner must have a temperament that does not prevent future adoption.

Good Samaritan funds are only awarded for treatment of animals at the College of Veterinary Medicine at Washington State University.
