Dr. Kay was selected by the American Animal Hospital Association to receive the 2009 Hill's Animal Welfare and Humane Ethics Award. This award is given annually to an individual who has advanced animal welfare through extraordinary service or by furthering humane principles, education, and understanding. Dr. Kay was selected as the 2011 Leo K. Bustad Companion Animal Veterinarian of the Year, an award presented every year by the American Veterinary Medical Association to a veterinarian whose work exemplifies and promotes the human animal bond.

Since the release of her book, Speaking for Spot, Dr. Kay has lectured extensively and written numerous magazine articles on the topic of medical advocacy. She was a featured guest on the popular National Public Radio show, Fresh Air with Terry Gross. Her award winning blog, "Spot Speaks" is posted weekly (www.speakingforspot.com). Dr. Kay is a staff internist at Upstate Veterinary Specialists, with locations in Greenville, South Carolina, and Asheville, North Carolina.
